HER STORY UNSHAKEN

Lillie Clifton a Match for Shrewd Cross-Examiners.

Again in the Witness Chair in the Trial of Agent Gardner.

Her Evidence Will Require Positive Contradiction to Clear Him.

Despite the caustic remarks of grave Reorder Smyth about the prurient curiosity espectability to visit the court-room during the trial of cases in which the testimony was of a character to make its relators dush with shame, there were a dozen women clamoring for admission to Part I. of the Court of General Sessions to-day, where

A dozen persona, cab-drivers, saloon-keepers, society agents and citizens were brought in during the shameful recital yesterday and identified by the Clifton as persons who had taken part in one and another of the drinking surees, cab rides, lunches and other experiences she claims to have had with Gardner, and articles that she had marked herself or caused reputable dealers or other persons to mark for identification and had left them along the way as isndmarks, either in the form of gitts to Gardner or his wile or otherwise, enter into the atory; articles identical in description with them have been identified by her on the witness stand as her landmarks.

The Claim of a Committee of the witness stand as her landmarks.

The Claim of a Conspiracy. All manner of people may be called by the prosecution to corroborate her story, or must be called by the detense, with an imperative be called by the derense, with an imperative "Musi," to contradict her.

It is just as idle, say the lawyers, for Mr. Jerome and Mr. Goff to sneer and issinuate that Supt. Thomas Byrnes and his subordinate, Chief Inspector McLaughlin, second only to Byrnes as a consummate thief catcher; capt. Devery, Detective-berg. Crowley, Lawyer Louis Allen, the Chiton herself, cab drivers, Gerry agents and Farkburst ex-agents, saloon-keepers, restaurateurs, the District-Attorney and numerous citizens have joined in a conspiracy to sens Gardner to prison in an effort to sustain the Superintendent of Police in his controversy with Nev. Dr. Parkhurst, unless they can disprove all this woman's story.

That Islie Clifton is an admirable witness all court experts agree. Despite her con-That I alile Clifton is an admirable witness all court experts agree. Despite her contession that sue has been a keeper of disorder. I houses for a third of her life, trafficking in man's weakness and the debaucher; of her frail isters, there remains a semblance of womaniness, as snown when she implored the Recorder not to force her to give the name of one of her successive paramours because of his innocent wite and their children.

And this womaniness was only emphasized by Mr. Jerome when he drew out that two or three years ago, when she troke with this paramour, he such her for money and other things he had given to her.

this paramour, he sued her for money and other things he had given to her.

The atory of Lillie Ciliton is full of little details quite unnecessary to this case, but which, if true in any part, show that Gardner consorted with a wom an of exactly the class of law-breakers he and Dr. Parkhurst claffined to be lighting against with so much clamor of virtue.

If, on the contrary, Messra Guff and Jerome are able to prove, for instance, that Gardner was ill at home or out of town, or in Court, or anywhere else on the days and nights when the Ciliton swears he was calculating with her during October, November and December, then she will te proven a liar and her story a perjury.

Mo amount of charge and counter charge of police corruption by Messrs. Jerome and Goff will take the place of positive proof be-

Not even the moral support of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, and his repeated expressions of confidence in Gard-ner, nor that of the wan-faced and sadly beautiful girl-wife and prespective mother will serve as a sufficient answer to the story of the Clifton if it stands uncon-tradicted.

The Ciliton Resumes the Witness Stand. The Cliffest Resumes the Witness Stand.

The interesting complaining witness was as cool as Mr. J. rome when she resumed her place in the witness chair this morning.

She was perfectly unruffled when her inquisitor asked the Recorder to adjourn last evening on the ground that he was exhausted. The lawyer intwo hours had not succeeded by all the arts of gross-examination, by coax—"Fran Bws. Co. bott a their "Wener," "Special Dane Birm" and "Lagen Birm".

ing, scoiding, pleading, abusing, wheedling and thundering at her in making any impression upon her impertureability, and her story stood for what it was worth, as if he had not essayed to break it down.

This morning site sat in the witness-chair, high above the crowd, and watched with an eager, feminine interest the regular morning business of the Recorder of receiving pleadings and sentencing prisoners.

Her face expressed all the emotions one would expect to find in any woman of ordinary intelligence, refinement and Sensibilities.

would expect to find in any would expect to find in any would expect to find in any would expect to find the same and sensibilities.

There was curlosity regarding some cases and pity for some prisoners, of whom one, a youthful-looking feilow of apparently small interiect, seemed to excite her compassion.

It was 11.40 when this point had been gained, and the Gardner trial was resumed.

Police Justice Taintor, he who rebelled against the ruling of the Board of Police Justices, that magistrates should follow the law and issue warrants only to such persons as the law specified for the purpose, and declared that he would continue to issue warrants to Dr. Parkhursts men, was a spectator at the trial to-day.

Lawyer Jerome began by moving that all of the testimony of Kate Amos, alias Lillie clifton, relating to transactions occurring on dates prior to Nov. 20 be stricken from the record on the ground that they had no connection with the charge of attempted extoration, which, if done at all, was done Nov. 20 and Dec. 4.

This motion was dealed, and then the questioning of the witness was resumed by Mr.

Jerome.

The Clifton told again how she called, as The Clifton told again how she called, as the full told again how she called, as the clifton told again how she called, as the full told the barkeeper that the full told the police, and when they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the apartment on the second they went up to the

The Clifton told again how she called, as The Clifton told again how she called, as agreed, at the Lexington avenue house, where Gardner boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Merritt, Oct. 16. She said Mrs. Merritt opened the door, and Gardner answered the rap at the parlor door, and, stepping out into the hall, detained her there while Mrs. Gardner put on a wrapper. He said:

"It is time you'dd come. All those houses in Fifty-third street are going to be 'pulled,' and yours among the rest."

"Yes, and you accepted the invitations and drank wine with the man you were trying to entrap," said Mr. Jerome, sercastically.

"Yes, and enjoyed it, too!" returned the Cilton with a wicked smile and as 19 look towards the young men of the press.

It was rumored around Police Headquarters both yesterday and to-day, and also in the Court of General Sessions, that a new chief detective had been appointed for Dr. Park-detective had been appoi

The Witness Excited at Last.

The Clifton got very much excited when, after replying affirmatively to a query as to whether she knew a man named Jack Dooley, the cross-examiner demanded:

"Dignt you once buy some property in Fourteenth atreet in Jack Dooley's name?"

Then Lille Clifton got excited and, denying the suggestion, shouted:

"No man ever got a dollar of my money, you can bet!"

Mr. Jerome asked that Jack Dooley be brought into Court, and some one went out after that gentleman, but never returned.

The clifton called on Capt. Devery Dec. 2 and found chief Inspector McLaughlin there. The Clifton said "Capt Devery med. 2 and marked the bills. I took down the numbers of the bills and took the money away in two rolls." Mr. Jerome aske

Mr. Jerome asked what the two police officials said about Gardner, and she replied; "Ob. something about wanting to make sure of catoning the reacal, and like that.

"By appointment Detective-Sergt. Crowley came to my house Dec. 4, and said: 'Go ahead, we'll foliow you.' So I got a cab and telling him to drive to 70 Lexington avenue I went away.' Oh, yes, Crowley said, 'If Gardner comes out of his door with you he'll be followed. You go ahead, we'll look after the rest."

"What was the arrangement if Gardner didn't come out with you?' asked Mr. Jerome. Jerome.

"Will, if he didn't come out, then the $150 was gone, I suppose. I suppose the police would have followed me home. I don't know
